

EPIGRAPH : “What we lose does not leave; it waits.”

ABOUT THE BOOK

WHISPER TO YOU emerged gradually from poems written in moments of reflection rather than intention. What began as isolated lines became, over time, a coherent meditation on love, absence, and personal accountability.

These poems do not seek resolution or reconciliation. They acknowledge the persistence of memory, the weight of regret, and the quiet ways in which love may endure after it has lost its place in one's life. The voice within these pages is neither pleading nor absolved, it observes, remembers, and accepts.

If these poems resonate, it is because loss is a shared human experience, though its details are always individual. This work is offered not as explanation, but as witness.

About the Author

As a young graduate who writes poetry as a personal pursuit, I found a quiet space for reflection and self expression in poetry . What began as a way to give words to thoughts and feelings that often remained unspoken gradually became a deeper exploration of love, loss, loneliness, memory, longing, and the complexities of human emotions.

My writing is deeply personal, often drawn from emotions, experiences, the stories that I heard and moments that leave lasting impressions . With a preference for raw and melancholic expression, the poems explore both the beauty and darker sides of human connection. For me, poetry is not about having all the answers. It is about capturing a feeling before it fades, preserving a moment without a picture , and saying what ordinary words sometimes cannot.

This book is a reflection of that journey, a collection of emotions once carried quietly, now printed in pages .

Personal note : This book isn't just a book It's a piece of my life I decided to let strangers hold.
